HOW TO BABYSIT AT AN ARCADE

The key to this ruse is to not let yer kids see you having fun.
If they figure out you love going to House Of TARG as much as they do, then you can kiss the "if you don't go to bed now
I won't take you to the arcade" bargaining chip goodbye.

BRUISED TONGUE: WILD IN THE STREETS

An update from Ottawa's favourite underground tape dubbing lathe trolls

We've been working hard compiling tracks and digging to the deepest and the darkest realms to assemble our annual, FREE 60-minute cassette compilation together for YOU, the freaks that have supported us all year round. AFTERBURNERS VOL. 4 will be available in a limited edition of 200 copies (+ a free download) during OTTAWA EXPLOSION WEEKEND, June 13-16th, and once it's gone it's gone for good. Here's to a fourth year of filling your boombox with summertime bone roasters!

Keep your eyes peeled for brand new cassettes from GRIME KINGS, and BONNIE DOON, a couple top secret lathe releases, + our first proper 12" vinyl release from Montreal's ULTRATHIN.

See you at TARG, friends!

Bruised Tongue is an Ottawa, Ontario based label owned and operated by Pierre Richardson and Craig Proulx. They like to release weird and fun things that their friends do so that other people can feel the noise. www.bruisedtongue.com

TOP 10 SIMILARITIES BETWEEN BUS DRIVERS & MUSICIANS

By: Gnasher

1. If you're talented, you will receive praise and people will tell others just how great you are.
2. If you're terrible you'll be verbally & maybe even physically abused.
3. You get to talk to a ton of babes, though I'd argue that musicians get a lot more "action" than bus drivers.
4. You will be the subject of unwanted attention. Usually by crazy / drunk people or crazy drunk (krunk) people, or "fans" as I like to call them.
5. One sided conversations with "fans" are common to both professions. It's important not to upset the "fan" by rudely blowing them off. Engage for up to 5 minutes before explaining why you can't continue chatting. For example: "there's a tough corner ahead and I really need to focus", or "I gotta find the promoter to get my beer tickets".
6. People will wait an unreasonable amount of time in terrible weather for your bus / band to show up. And when you do show up, you smile at them all and say "You're welcome".
7. Conversely, people will chase you down in the street, arms flailing, screaming for you to stop. Sometimes you do, sometimes you don't. Kinda depends on how you're feeling that minute.
8. You will be recorded illegally and scrutinized on social media.
9. The ringing in your ears could be tinnitus or the next stop chime.
10. The bar your shitty band played at and the bus have the exact same odour.

1980s Arcade Memories by Cur

This memory involves a specific game and a nifty game trick from the past. The year is late 1983, or so, all I really know is I was pretty new to High School, and finding skipping school pretty easy and enjoyable.

The Merivale Mall is a 2 minute walk from Merivale High School. In my day the mall housed a seedy, Mom and Pop Donut Shop, you could pretty much spend the day there, just had to buy a coffee now and then.

Konami's Track and Field spent an incredible amount of time occupying the back corner of the donut shop, during school hours there was always a line up of kids waiting to do anything but sit through a class.

Events included the 100m dash, long jump, and javelin. In every event speed was the key to success, the game didn't use a joystick, buttons were used to run or jump, that's where a coffee spoon came in handy!
